The Copyright, Designs and patents Act of 1988 is designed to protect the rights of the copyright holder. Penalties under the law can currently include unlimited fines and jail terms of up to two years. As there are methods by which copies of this software can be traced, there is a risk for anyone copying or handling copies of the program. Computer Concepts has, in the past, brought cases against persons copying and persons attempting to copy programs (other than for their personal back-up) and we will continue to try every avenue open to us to track down offenders.

We believe in trying to offer the best programs we can at a reasonable cost. However, we need your co-operation in helping to prevent illegal copies of this or any other program from being distributed.
